

NewsLetters – 2nd week

Our focus this week was once more primarily on conceptualization and brainstorming, and we continue gather information from our client regarding the knowledge background of target students.

We visited Elizabeth Forward Middle School for the first time on September 4th. We took a tour around the Dream Factory where our deliverable will finally be installed. What's more important, we had a few useful conversations with the school staff, including the superintendent, the Principal and the woodshop teachers. We checked out their 3D printer and some of the student works.

The study of our client had been extremely important as a part of our research. And we came out with several good ideas designed around 3D printing. During the brainstorm, we had three complete ideas. all our four teammates contributed to the three ideas. By the end of the week, many references and documents were prepared for these potential ideas. We planned to pitch all the ideas to the client next week.

Another task that we started this week was the design of team Logo and poster. Our artist Keyin Wu presented four versions of drafts for the team Logo, other three of us gave her some useful individual feedbacks.
